DETAILED ACTION

Priority

Receipt is acknowledged of papers submitted under 35 U.S.C. 119(a)-(d), which papers have been placed of record in the file.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 11,18-20,23 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being clearly anticipated by Nemchinsky. Note column 4 in the cited patent, lines 28-67, which set forth the claimed materials of the insert, Hf and Zr, and also set forth the claimed diameter and length of the insert.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 21,22,24-27 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Nemchinsky in view of Steiger et al. The Nemchinsky patent teaches the claimed subject matter except for showing the insert comprising Cu. The patent to Steiger et al is applied for teaching that it is conventional and leads to electrode longevity to have an insert 74 in electrode 70 comprise Cu. The environment is a gas discharge laser, which effectively forms a plasma environment. In view of this teaching it would have been obvious to modify the Nemchinsky system to use a copper; insert , to provide a low cost insert which does prolong the electrode life. Use of a copper alloy in lieu of the copper, as per claim 22 is considered an obvious choice, this choice dependent on the materials processed with the torch and the temperature ;and energy levels desired. As per claim 27 , use of the torch to cut steel is considered obvious and routine, considering the widespread use of inserts in electrodes of plasma cutting devices in use

Allowable Subject Matter

Claims 28 and 29 allowed.

Claims 12-17 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

The following is a statement of reasons for the indication of allowable subject matter: with respect to claims 12-17 the prior art of record does not teach an insert comprising a composition of Zr and Hf in the designated percentage ratios. Claims 28 and 29 are allowable for also designating the range of percentages of Zr and Hf.

Conclusion

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Walters and Weatherly are cited for disclosing pertinent plasma torch inserts for electrodes.
